BIO

Daniel Green is a senior member of Arnon, Tadmor-Levy's Technology & Transactional IP team, working primarily in the areas of life sciences, technology law, intellectual property, and corporate partnering.

Daniel represents emerging and established companies in the life sciences, pharmaceutical, medical device, digital health, information technology, cleantech and defense industries, and works extensively with Israel's leading technology transfer organizations at universities and medical centers. He represents some of Israel's most dynamic technology startups, as well as some of the world's leading technology companies engaged in collaborations with, and acquisitions of, Israel's most promising companies.

Daniel is recognized by The Legal 500 as a leading practitioner, praised for heading an outstanding team and for his expertise at the intersection of technology, IP, and complex commercial transactions.

Daniel has extensive experience representing clients engaged in diverse commercial and technology-related transactions, particularly with respect to: structuring, negotiating, and documenting complex licensing, development and technology transfer arrangements, clinical trial and CRO agreements, OEM, manufacturing and other distribution, supply and franchise arrangements, and international collaborations and technology consortia, joint venture, and diverse corporate partnering agreements. He also advises clients on issues related to the Israel Innovation Authority and on intellectual property aspects of M&A and investment transactions.

Daniel speaks regularly about intellectual property and licensing transactions, and all aspects of Israel's innovation ecosystem. He has lectured at the Law School of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and at the University's inter-disciplinary BioDesign Program. He also often speaks about these matters to visiting scholars and businesspeople from China, India, and East Asia. In addition, Daniel has written on legal and practical aspects of intellectual property and related transactional issues.

Daniel works extensively on Asia-related transactions and co-heads the firm's Asia Practice and the China Desk. He served for many years on the board of the Israel-Asia Center, a non-profit organization that sponsors Asian fellows in Israel and which is involved with public education about Israel-Asia issues.

The international legal ranking of Chambers Global notes that: "Daniel Green is best known for commercial IP work" and is "very good at long complex framework agreements" according to sources. The Legal 500 notes that "practice head Daniel
