BIO

Ben Fridrich practice focuses on taxation; he specializes in real estate taxation. He has extensive experience advising real estate companies, entrepreneurs, and landowners on a wide range of real estate tax matters in Israel, including real estate taxation, income tax, and VAT. Ben provides guidance on sales transactions, urban renewal projects of all types, combination transactions, and complex commercial transactions.

Ben accompanies his clients through tax planning and provides recommendations for the optimal taxation structure required to carry out transactions. He provides and edits legal memos and opinions for clients, assists in preparing and submitting required reports to real estate taxation offices, and represents clients before Israeli tax authorities, including negotiating with real estate tax inspectors and conducting assessment discussions.

In recent years, Ben worked in the taxation department of the accounting firm EY Israel.

Ben currently serves as a TA at the Open University for Real estate taxation courses.
